

Spokes 2 large, suspension design Studio García Cumini 2016

FOSCARINI

Spokes Large conveys the concepts of lightness and transparency together with the solidity of the shape in metal rod, all found in the original version, in a larger and more scenic way. The project draws its inspiration from the spokes of a bicycle wheel, hence the name Spokes. Spokes is a lamp that magically contains the light within it, while at the same time allowing it to filter out. In fact the double LED built-in lighting system makes it possible to light the floor or the surface underneath the lamp with a warm and natural light, while creating magical games of light and shadows on the walls and ceiling. The setting opportunities are various: the lamp can be placed either in a residential environment, in the middle of a room, or in a commercial one where, even in case of high ceilings, it can be used in combination with the original version to create fascinating lighting compositions.

Description

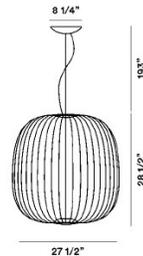

The opaque epoxy powder varnished steel spokes are attached to the upper part by two ABS/polycarbonate discs and to the lower part of the aluminium module that acts as the housing and heat sink for the two LED boards. The electric cable that powers the boards is invisible, because it is housed in one of the spokes. The suspension cable is in stainless steel and the electric cable is transparent. The ceiling rose and zinc-coated metal bracket has a shiny white batch dyed ABS covering.

Studio García Cumini

Established in Udine (Italy) in 2012, the García Cumini Associati studio brings together the consolidated experience of its two founders in the design industry. The company merges two multi-disciplinary cultures and creates designs, art installations, artistic direction, graphic design and brand identity, developed with the aim of making people fall in love with a given product or company. The main philosophy and ethic of the studio is to bring to life an intuition or a poetic vision, assessing projects from every angle, with a keen eye on technology and the client's artistic expressions and style.
